Residents' Day at ACFAS 2019 a Huge Success

The College's first-ever Residents' Day, held a day before ACFAS 2019 in New Orleans, proved to be a runaway success that helped attendees better navigate the transition from residency to full-time practice.

Many of the soon-to-be practitioners in attendance appreciated the speakers' candid, real-life advice on how to stand out from the crowd, land a job and grow professionally as foot and ankle surgeons. Hearing tips not often shared during residency helped ease some of the anxiety residents at any stage can experience before they start practicing full time.

With sessions such as "Don't Let the Start Be the End: Facilitating the Process" to "Outreach/Make Time: Get Your Name Out There" coming in as attendee favorites, attendees gave high praise to the program's offerings.

Attendees topped off their day with an informal networking event featuring open Q&A and left well-equipped with tools, contacts and insights to prepare them for this next exciting stage of their career.

"Residents' Day was an innovative new forum to provide resident foot and ankle surgeons with straightforward career advice on everything from competing for that first job to finding that perfect practice fit a few years down the road. We wanted to give our newest surgeons the best opportunity be successful, and I believe this program absolutely helped make that happen," said Matthew E. Williams, DPM, FACFAS, a Residents' Day faculty member.

Faculty member Barry I. Rosenblum, DPM, FACFAS, added, "It was great to see a room full of residents—who will very soon become our colleagues—eagerly soak up as much information as possible about how to ease the transition from the relative safety net of residency to real-world practice."

Based on the successful outcome of this pilot program, plans are already underway for a second Residents' Day to be held during ACFAS 2020 in San Antonio. Watch ACFAS publications later this year for details.
